Mural Restoration Project

Corporation Alley, 136 S. Kalamazoo Mall

In 1974, Colleen Rockey, a recent graduate of WMU, was one of six artists chosen by the City of Kalamazoo to paint outdoor murals. Of the original six, Colleen's mural in Corporation Alley is the only one remaining.

This past summer, Colleen returned to Kalamazoo to restore the faded colors and peeling paint. With the help and cooperation of the Comerica Bank Building management, City of Kalamazoo, the building owner and current tenant (Climb! Kalamazoo) she restored the mural to its original beauty. Colleen views the restoration of this public art as a benefit for the City of Kalamazoo and a gift to the people who reside here.

Please view the students work at the following four venues:

- A. Sidney Anderson – “May I Have Another”. This work comments on tragedy and the escapism that people use to cope.
- B. James Bond Chung – His series of work expresses this voice found through art, ceramics. Through my time, I explore, make mistakes, and try again to share with you my voice I have hidden for so long.
- C. Jasper Hursley – “Letting Go”. Uncontrolled, High Fire, Wood-fire Anagama Pottery. Finding beauty by releasing control.
- D. Vinh Le – Vinh’s point into art making has been through exploring materials in a way that seeks to uncover their inherent physical properties, revealing an unseen and unexpected complexity.
- E. Christina Maki – My work is about sentimentality of stuffed animals from childhood.
- F. Andrea Nelson –Andrea’s work is influenced by non-traditional ways of texture and the relationships of color. Her work is about finding ways to do something new.
- G. Ally Nutt – Ally explores feeling, line, and landscape with her abstract paintings. She uses color as a tool to evoke certain emotions in viewers.
- H. Bryce Perela – “House”. Using camera, and different pieces of popular culture; Bryce has been using artwork to reflect and organize his own expressions.

- I. Kaitlin Rode – “Shower Thoughts”. These digital Inkjet prints aim to please the eye with the soft curves and bends of the female body.
- J. Chris Radford – Still Live of Everyday Objects. With the use of dramatic lighting, these photographs of everyday items become a sort of surreal but minimal environments that become full of life.
- K. Olivia Schutt – Acrylic and oil paintings emphasize color and diverse perspectives by including scenery, real life experiences, and emotion throughout her paintings.
- L. Darby Sayles – For this particular series, Darby’s primary goal was to express what ‘home’ means to her currently, by means of print.
- M. Mel Wilcox – Mel’s artwork reflects an obsession with the flesh, tactile sense, and interpersonal relationships.
- N. Jessica Zartman – “Pseudo Self”, a glimpse onto that which holds her true happiness.

RETRACE:MI

4-7:30 pm

Catch the TUK-TUK in front of the Epic Center

Take a free ride on the RETRACE TUK-TUK around downtown Kalamazoo as you listen to stories of migration, displacement and belonging. RETRACE: MI is a participatory art project by Patricia Villalobos Echeverría, who spent the last year and a half collecting stories from Southwest Michigan's Latino and Asian community members. The recorded voices were interwoven into a soundscape that will play inside the tuk-tuk, a three-wheeled motorized vehicle common in many parts of the world.

SHERRILL ROLAND'S THE JUMPSUIT PROJECT

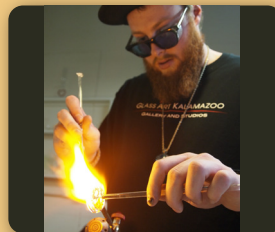

Epic Center, 1st floor lobby, 359 S. Kalamazoo Mall

Sherrill Roland's Jumpsuit Project (2016 - present) developed out of the artist's personal experience of wrongful incarceration. With the goal of sparking conversation that addresses our ideas about incarceration, Roland's performance involves wearing an orange jumpsuit, standing within an area that size of a prison cell, and engaging in dialogue about prisons and people.

The performance is staged in conjunction with the Richmond Center's current exhibition, On the Inside Out, on view through October 28.
