ACGK – Tyree Broadway Artist Statement and Links

As a child, Tyree would roam his childhood home and touch all the bumps and ridges on the artwork his parents had. He didn't know this could damage the work but as a child nonetheless, he was drawn to the texture. He wants kids to enjoy and be drawn to his work as well. Therefore, he incorporates many of the same things he was and is attracted to in his art. Texture and wildlife have a prominent role in what he creates.

Friday

Oct 01, 2021 at 05:00 pm

Presented by City Centre Market and Deli at City Centre Market and Deli, 125 S. Kalamazoo Mall Drive, Kalamazoo, MI 49009

Madison Memering, a nature-inspired artist, will be showcasing hand-printed apparel, artist prints, stickers, original artworks & more!

<https://www.madisonmemering.com/>

PsyanoForest Cyanotype Studio crafts small-batch textile goods printed with the antique photographic process Cyanotype, both on a wearable scale and large-scale. The imagery that comprises the fabric patterns is from many sources often pulled from reimagined medical illustrations (both human and animal), pressed flowers/foliage, found objects, and photographs the artist has taken in the wilds of Michigan (including spider webs!). While most of the products are the signature blue proprietary to the cyanotype process, the artist also creates digital reproductions of the cyanotype prints and alters the colorings to then create yardage of colorful charmeuse silks with beautifully mirrored patterns.

PsyanoForest aims to be as ethically responsible as possible, and thus sources printing fabrics from small business artisans. Additionally, the cyanotype process is environmentally friendly and non-toxic. We provide all of our customers with instructions on how to care for their cyanotype-printed goods; the washing method also has a low environmental impact.

The products that we produce include (but are not limited to): shawls, long silk craves, silk bandanas, cotton bandanas, four-layer masks, wraps, silk-cotton voile bandanas, and long scarves, tapestries on salvaged textiles, and notecards.

Inspired by emotions, thoughts, and Bob Ross, painting has helped me realize that beauty is everywhere, you only have to look to see it.

Aliyah is a Michigan-based artist who practices the art of acrylic painting. Aliyah has been expressing herself through art since the age of 4. Aliyah is trying to achieve the goal of seeing beauty in everything, it's all about perspective. Aliyah focuses on whatever is on her mind. She tends to use painting as a way to reflect. Aliyah's creative process is based on what is on my mind at the time or what I may be going through in life. Aliyah seeks inspiration through friends and family, they give her the best ideas. Aliyah hopes to own her own art gallery featuring young artists who use art as a way of expressing themselves.

Friday

Oct 01, 2021 at 05:00 pm

Presented by Soul Artistry LLC at The Stamped Robin, 128 Portage Street, Kalamazoo, MI 49007

Shaquona Espinoza is an artist born and raised in Kalamazoo, Michigan. Art has always been a part of her life, but it wasn't until 2018 that she started painting with acrylic paints on canvas. She would focus on the simplicity and beauty of nature and with time she decided to paint faces that brought familiarity into her life. Knowing that her artwork/gift isn't just for her, but for others to love and enjoy, keeps her motivated to be creative and challenge herself. She tends to create artwork that challenges her perception of reality. She wants her art to make people feel good.

Shaquona's artwork has been showcased at Elements, the WMU Office for Sustainability, the Epic Center, the Black Arts and Cultural Center, Center for New Media at KVCC, Channel 8 News, and virtually during Juneteenth- curated by Soul Artistry LLC, Kalamazoo Institute of Arts during the West Michigan Area Art Show, Public Media Network, the Kalamazoo Defenders, and virtually- curated by the Black Arts and Cultural Center.

Photosynthesis Creations by Meg Ostara – Meg Parsley – Artist Statement and Link
Meg Ostara is 26 years old and new to the Kalamazoo area. Born in Indiana, her grandma taught her to paint by picking gourds in her garden and turning them into birdhouses. She explained texture and color blending as she used fan brushes for grass, and contrasting colors on flowers. She explained the importance of cleaning brushes but Meg has yet to not be a messy artist who ruins her brushes. She's lived in Michigan now for 8 years, spending much of her time in the upper peninsula, where she really fell in love with nature and water. She likes using pressed flowers because she feels it plays that there is always life to be had after death. Energy lingers. And prolongs the use of flowers and nature beyond usual use. When a bouquet is done at a wedding or a funeral how many times is that beauty just tossed. If you pick a flower, you cherish its wilt. Both literally and metaphorically. In relationships, there is beauty in the rise and fall. In life, there is beauty in the sting and songs. You can't have one without the other. Life and death, or more so death and rebirth, rising from your ashes, as well as nature, water, and its reflections, all belong to the important pieces of Meg's painting puzzle, that she pours a lot of emotion into as well. There is a story with every piece. She tries to add depth in the meaning of her paintings as well as in color. Shadow work is so important to her and her paintings have really helped her know and learn and appreciate her own shadow this last year. Truly, we see in the art a mere reflection of ourselves so long as we don't know the artist's story. So may her art help you on your journey home, whatever that is to you.
